

Any action which diminishes the ability of security advice to reach instantaneously a nationwide audience is foolish and short-sighted. Having a nationwide ability to communicate could save many lives. We all know that the 'National Alert System' is something of a joke. It is often ignored, like the proverbial car-alarm.

Do you really feel that this is the moment to restrict expansion of such facility? (And, is it a crime to allow it to be a commercial venture? Last time I looked, my Passport said 'USA'...not Bolivia nor PRC, thank Goodness.)
